

A few days ago, I heard the rough rumbling of a vacuum below me, it was 10:30 at night. There was barely enough cat fur left on the couch to clean but she insisted so I covered my ears and held back the urge to scream. People confuse me.

Why do we all do things that even we don't understand? Like I can barely hear my dad talk over the screaming, ongoing, ads on the tv so why does he keep on repeating the same thing! TAKE THE HINT! I CANT HEAR YOU! Or when the person next to me decides to scream "Among us!" for no reason at all.

People do so much stuff that I can't understand, and I do many things that other people may not understand. For example, I make stupid jokes, I do stupid things, and I bet that confuses people.

But that is a part of being human. It's fun to watch people do reckless or bizarre things (like drinking water out of a sanitizer bottle) or say things I don't understand. People confuse me, but you know... people are like a box of chocolates, you never know what you are going to get.

Link to music:

[https://ears sketch.gatech.edu/ears sketch2/?sharing=q64DTL9FMKD1o7\_zNJAg1A](https://ears sketch.gatech.edu/ears sketch2/?sharing=q64DTL9FMKD1o7_zNJAg1A)